So, after I bought three different versions of this song on Amazon.com this week, I happened to see that their #1 MP3 download of the day was Jeff Buckley's version -- and their #12, too. I think it may have appeared on multiple TV shows this week -- I know I saw it on one and remembered that I didn't actually own a copy of the song. (Well, maybe  matociquala sent it to me on a mix tape, but that tape's been lost for a decade or so.)

(Pitter pat. Pitter pat)

Seriously. Nobody actually SINGS that song. Mostly they just kind of chant it because it's too hard to sing. And she... hits the C.

No, I stared at the pictures because she's hot.

But she's hot because she hit the C.

...does that make sense?

Yes, actually.

You make an excellent human, young monotreme.

She is amazing; Begin to Hope is one of my favorite albums.

(also, I hope you don't mind me commenting. I found you via friendsfriends when I was playing around.)

Chaz -

From reading your many posts, and hearing of your dangerous exploits, I'm not sure if I'd be more concerned or surprised to learn that you're in hospital or in an army barracks. I hope they're feeding you right, wherever you are.

And now, when you hear the "Cheers" theme, "...where everybody knows your name" means "Arlington PD substation."

Well, everyone with taste?

I need a Firefly icon. I love yours!
